Canadian Bureau of International Education - Ottawa, Ontario

A global thinker who believes in global learning, you will share the empowering vision of the Canadian Bureau for International Education. As an organizational leader, international ambassador and chief relationship developer, you will work with the Board of Directors to shape the future and realize exciting possibilities through the creation and implementation of a new strategic plan.

CBIE is a national, non-profit, membership organization that promotes and supports the Canadian education system nationally and internationally by advancing education at all levels through the exchange of knowledge, perspectives and expertise across borders and cultures. More than 150 institutions are members, representing school boards, universities, colleges, languages schools, cégeps and polytechnics. CBIE also partners with industry to provide opportunities for experiential learning.

You will lead and inspire a team of fifty as CBIE continues to serve and support members with educational missions, partnerships, international student scholarship programs and major institutional capacity building contracts. You will administer merit-based financial support to Canadian and international students, share Canadian expertise and best practices, provide professional development to Canadian leaders, improve international learning outcomes for the world's students and enhance the public's understanding of the importance of global learning. Looking forward, you will encourage educational innovation in Canadian and international public/private arrangements.

Since 1966, CBIE has supported, designed and implemented over 100 international projects in 60 countries valued at $2.5 billion. Working alongside CBIE's funding stakeholders and members you will explore and secure new revenue streams to ensure that CBIE's approx. $10 million operating budget is strategically invested and adds value to the membership.
